To the Reader.

Such as by their place and calling (but especially Preachers) as haue occasion to speake publicly before the ignorant people, are to be admonished, that they neuer affect any strange inkhorne tearmes, but labour to speake so as is commonly receiued, and so as the most ignorant may well vnderstand them: neyther seeking to be ouer fine or curious, nor yet liuing ouer carelesse, vsing their speach as most men doe, and ordering their wits as the fewest haue done. Some men seeke so far for outlandish English, that they forget altogether their mothers language, so that if some of their mothers were aliue, they were not able to tell or vnderstand what they say; and yet these fine English Clearkes will say they speake in their mother tongue; but one might well charge them for counterfaying the Kings English. Also, some far iournied gentlemen, at their returne home, like as they loue to goe in forraigne apparrell, so they vwill pouder their talke vvith ouer-sea language. He that commeth lately out of France, will talke French English, and neuer blush at the matter. Another chops in with English Italianated, and applyeth the Italian phrase to our English speaking, the which is as if an Orator, that professeth to vter his minde in plaine Latine, would needs speake Poetrie, & far fetched colours of strange antiquitie. Doth any wise man thinke, that wit resteth in strange words, or else standeth it not in wholsome matter, and apt declaring of a mans minde? Doe we not speake, because we would haue others to vnderstand vs? or is not the tongue giuen for this end, that one might know what another meaneth? Therefore, either wee must make a difference of English, and say, some is learned English, and other some is rude English, or the one is Court talke, the other is Country-speech, or else wee must of necessitie banish all affected Rhetorique, and vse altogether one manner of language. Those therefore that will auoid this follie, and acquaint themselves with the plainest and best kinde of speech, must seeke from time to time such wordes as are commonly monly receiued, & such as properly may expresse in plaine manner, the whole conceit of their minde. And looke what words we best vnderstand, and know what they meane, the same should soonest be spoken, and first applyed, to the vtterance of our purpose. Therefore for this end, foure things would chiefly be obserued in the choise of words. First, that such wordes as wee vse, should be proper vnto the tongue wherein we speake. Againe, that they be plaine for all men to perceiue. Thirdly, that they be apt and meete, most properly to set out the matter. Fourthlie, that wordes translated, from one signification to another, (called of the Grecians Tropes;) be vsed to beautifie the sentence, as precious stones are set in a ring, to commend the gold. Now such are thought apt words, that properly agree vnto that thing, which they signifie, and plainly expresse the nature of the same. Therefore, they that haue regard of their estimation and credite, doe warily speake, & with choise, vter words most apt for their purpose. In waighrie causes, graue vvordes are thought most needsfull that the greatnesse of the matter, may the rather appeare, in the vehemencie of their talke. So likewise of other, like order must be taken. Albeit some, not onely doe not obserue this kinde of aptnesse, but also they fall into much fondnes, by vsing words out of place and applying them to diuers matters, without all discretion.

If thou be desirous (gentle Reader) rightly and readily to vnderstand, and to profit by this Table, and such like, then thou must learne the Alphabet, to wit, the order of the Letters as they stand, perfectly without booke, and where every Letter standeth: as (b) neere the beginning, (n) about the midst, and (t) toward the end. Now if the word, which thou art desirous to finde, begin with (a) then looke in the beginning of this Table, but if with (v) looke towards the end. Again, if thy word begin with (ca) looke in the beginning of the Letter (c) but if with (cu) then looke toward the end of that Letter. And so of all the rest, &c.

And further vnderstand, that all such words as are deriued and drawne from the Greeke, are noted with this letter (g.) And the French are marked thus (§) but such words as are deriued from the Latine and others, haue no marke at all.

Farewell.
